According to the FBI, Wolf had been communicating with an ISIS recruiter online for several months. He allegedly told the recruiter that he wanted to travel to Syria to fight for ISIS. Wolf also allegedly sent the recruiter a video of himself pledging allegiance to ISIS.

The FBI said that Wolf was planning to travel to Syria in the coming weeks. He had allegedly purchased a plane ticket and was in the process of obtaining a passport.

Wolf was arrested at his home in Boca Raton on Monday morning. He appeared in court later that day and was ordered held without bond.

If convicted, Wolf faces a maximum sentence of death. High treason is the most serious crime that can be committed against the United States. It is defined as "levying war against the United States" or "adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

The last person to be convicted of high treason in the United States was Tomoya Kawakita, a Japanese immigrant who was executed in 1952 for spying for Japan during World War II.

The case against Wolf is a reminder of the threat that ISIS poses to the United States. The group has been responsible for numerous terrorist attacks around the world, including the attacks in Paris in November 2015 and the attack in San Bernardino, California, in December 2015.

The FBI is urging the public to be vigilant and to report any suspicious activity to law enforcement. The agency said that it is working to prevent terrorist attacks and to keep the United States safe.

Noah Wolf's Background

Noah Wolf was born in Boca Raton, Florida, in 1999. He is the son of a Jewish father and a Christian mother. Wolf was raised in a secular household and attended public schools.

Wolf has no history of mental illness or criminal activity. He is described by his friends and family as a quiet and reserved person.

Wolf's alleged involvement with ISIS is a shock to his family and friends. They said that they never saw any signs that he was interested in terrorism.

The Investigation into Noah Wolf

The FBI began investigating Wolf in early 2016 after receiving a tip from a concerned citizen. The FBI said that it had been monitoring Wolf's online activity for several months.
